P02.04.500. Community Campus Directors Council

The president of the University of Alaska may appoint a statewide Community Campus Directors Council (CCDC) comprised of the community campus deans and directors and one administrator from each MAU with community campus oversight.

The president may assign University of Alaska administrators to meet with the CCDC as needed.

- A. The CCDC will represent University of Alaska community campuses and will provide assessments and recommendations to the president and chancellors. The president must ensure systemwide that community campuses are resourced and able to provide accessible, quality postsecondary academic, vocational and continuing education opportunities and access that enrich the lives and embrace the cultures of their communities, region and the state. CCDC will complement measures already in place to do that.
- B. The objective of the CCDC is to serve as an informational and advisory group to the president on high level issues of common importance to the community campuses across the University of Alaska.
- C. The CCDC is not a federated organization and will not encroach on the direct supervisory functions of the community campus deans and directors.
